Matthew, Mark, Luke Content*

From Archbishop Thomson, who divided the events in Matthew, Mark, and Luke into 89 sections*

*from Thiessen, Henry R., Introduction to the New Testament, Eerdmans Printing Co., Grand Rapids Michigan, 1954, pg 101

The “Synoptic Problem”

If the three Synoptic Gospels are totally independent of each other in origin and development, why do they resemble each other so closely, even to exact verbal agreement in many places? If, on the other hand, they have a literary relationship to each other, how can they be three independent witnesses to the deeds and teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ?*
